

The Follow-up Story

by sol Thursday, Dec 5 2013, 10:27am

international / prose / post

The masses have a pea brain, research this fact academically or simply observe media magnates (maggots) like Rupert Murdoch, who verify the fact by arrogantly flying in and out of nations and influencing the outcome of Federal Elections.

Indeed, if the masses were able to think, people like Murdoch would be unable to determine which candidate takes office. In Australia Murdoch has been directly responsible for installing and/or removing numerous national leaders from office, Rudd, Gillard, Howard, Keating, Whitlam, are a few notable examples. In the U.S. his Fox news network was largely responsible for drawing the American population into an illegal war based on LIES, orchestrated propaganda and massive deceptions of which Murdoch was fully AWARE!

Now think about the reality of ONE private citizen with a personal agenda that is able to wield such enormous power and then realise that whatever political system that nation pretends to adopt it is a lie -- Murdoch is the perfect example of plutocratic power and the thorough corruption/subversion of democracy.

In a democratic society with a free and diverse media, Murdoch's media would be counterbalanced by other views of equal penetration/reach; however, the reality today is that media diversification has almost been eliminated in favour of a tiny (CFR) elite and other super-wealthy interests.

Murdoch was able to influence the outcome of a government inquiry into illegal phone hacking in the UK and avoid jail when it was plain that he was aware of and condoned the practice. Instead of a stiff jail sentence Murdoch was 'reduced' to stating that the inquiry was the most "humbling experience" of his life!

Human nature being what it is, it is not at all unusual that Murdoch would use his power to BENEFIT HIMSELF and others like him; to balance that situation democratic governments once enforced tight media ownership laws preventing concentrations forming in few hands.

The most notable nation that has a higher concentration of media ownership than the west's CFR group is communist China, how very revealing! But the critical difference is that communistic political structures do NOT allow for any individual to control critical information systems or anything else for that matter. In other words communist China has more checks and balances than the CFR controlled western media -- who said communism doesn't work? Furthermore, if any individual improperly acquires more influence than other members of the Politburo they are unceremoniously taken out the back and shot, after appropriate show trials of course -- a remedy urgently in need of application with types like Murdoch!

The unfortunate reality in the plutocratic west is that we lack all the necessary checks and balances of communistic and democratic societies. We have been reduced to a controlled mass media and an INEFFECTIVE alternative media which has lost the art of the 'follow-up story.' In other words a hot topic or important subject that affects nations and populations is allowed to fall from public attention before it is satisfactorily resolved -- learn something you alternative media dunces!

The mass media is fully aware of the power of the follow-up story (Vietnam war for example) and goes to great pains to only briefly mention compromising news and then move quickly onto the next story so citizens become overloaded with trivia and irrelevant news and lose sight of important issues like massive environmental degradation and resource exploitation by multi-national corporations. Corporations that imagine they own a nation's resources simply because they extract them. Well, trivia overloaded populations may all be shocked to hear that the rightful owners of a nation's wealth are the people; YES, morons, a nation's wealth is literally OWNED by the PEOPLE! Now consider the trillion dollar profits that are never seen by populations whose nations are being plundered at speed by transnational mega-corporations!

Socially important issues require CONSTANT press until the people with their collective pea brain wake to the facts. Have I mentioned "the coalition of the willing" and war crimes trials? Get with it, morons, or you will find yourselves completely oppressed -- did you know that a society under constant surveillance is not a free society? Every move you make is now recorded, morons. The media should be reminding you that you are all slaves, until you decide to rectify that appalling situation and restore representative democracy and the equitable distribution of wealth to your nations.

Consider again why and how people like Murdoch brazenly display their power and avoid taking responsibility for their crimes. My take on a humbling experience for Murdoch and his ilk is a bullet in the brain, Chinese style -- you reading this, Wendi Deng?

It seems that Chinese communism has much to teach the west on the checks and balances of power.

Jungle Drum Prose/Poetry. <http://jungledrum.lingama.net/news/story-895.html>