

Creek

international / poetry / post

the river
is more like a creek
today
but it flows
in abundant and lean
times

it is never spent
but moves according to the circumstances
in which it finds itself

a bunch of twisted dried grass and twigs forms a raft upon which various insects sail downstream
too easy, but my lot is upstream always against the tide

at times
a vessel without a consignment a river without a course at other times
a creek that gurgles
and finds its way
to the open sea
